Forgotten Books, United States, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Report on Irrigation Districts in California: For the Year 1930 Following an unusually dry winter many sections of the State entered the growing season with a deficient supply of soil moisture. This was in some measure compensated for by spring rains, although many crops required extra irrigations. March, April and May were good growing months, without serious frost periods, notwithstanding that the latter month was the coolest May recorded in California since 1897. June to August were seasonably normal, without long periods of excessive heat, as sometimes occur in the interior of the State. September was unusually cool, but October, being warm and unusually dry, was a favorable month for harvesting rice and other crops. Killing frosts occurred in the last week of November. On the whole, 1930 was a most favorable year with most crops producing in excess of early estimates. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
