John Randolph, of Virginia, on the Retrenchment Resolutions: Delivered in the House of Representatives of the United States, February 1, 1828 I have been replied to by various gentlemen (some of whom I have not the honor to know by person) on different sides of the House, in a manner which I do not doubt was perfectly satisfactory at least to the speakers themselves. I certainly do not wish to disturb their self complacency, de minimis non carat, whether of persons or of things. The gentleman from Ohio, [mn Vance] with that blunt plainness and candor which, I am told, belong to him, and which I admire in preportion as they are rare qualities in these days - I like him the better for his surly honestv - I hope he will take no o? ence at the term, for I can assure him that none is intended - charged me, in my absence, (so my friends have in formed me, ) with what I believe he would not hesitate to have charged to my face, and...
