Excerpt from An Address Delivered at Charlestown, at the Request of the Young Men, Without Distinction of Party, in Commemoration of the Battle of Bunker Hill, Vol. 2 Who could hesitate to Join in so holy a work? We meet without distinction of party. NO little shades of difference created by the passing events of the day, are permitted to disturb the harmony of feeling with which we now come together as brothers, as citizens of a common country, as joint heirs of a common inheritance in the glory of our ancestors and the blessings which they have bequeathed to their posterity. If as children of New England we celebrate this anniversary with peculiar interest, in your minds, fellow-citizens of Charlestown, its return must awaken a still more lively emotion. On the 17th of June, 1775, the storm of war, which had previously raged in distant regions, and of which you had heard only some faint and feeble echo, burst with more than wonted fury upon your own fair and flourishing town.
