Excerpt: . . . to look out for another earth, which they at last fortunately found in the words of St. Peter; who says, Nevertheless we, according to promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. To this new earth, they would 9 2 Pct. iii. 13. persuade we see this promise is generally accomplished; the meek do inherit the earth, that is, have the best chance of acquiring and enjoying the blessings of this life, as well as the happiness of another. RUELTU is the most unpardonable of all crimes, because it is without temptation, and therefore without excuse. Mercy is the most amiable attribute of God; and a virtue most becoming the situation of man, because the sins which he perpetually commits, and the dangers with which he is constantly surrounded, oblige him to stand in need of it every hour: it is peculiarly congenial to the benevolent spirit of the Christian religion, and as such is here enforced by the Author of it, in this short but emphatical declaration; in which it is remarkable, that we find nothing which limits our exercise of this amiable virtue within any bounds, or confines it to any description; not to our relations, our friends, our neighbours, our countrymen, nor even to mankind: from whence we may reasonably conclude, that he requires us to extend it to every thing that has life and sensibility. The words stem to regard more the disposition of..
