However, in December 1993, the Postal Service decided to retain mail processing for the 17 ZIP Codes in the new Main Post Office because of political concerns about moving jobs DAR, about 60 percent of the out of the city. According to the April 1994 new Post Offices construction was complete at that time. The DAR indicated that the decision to incorporate processing for the 17 ZIP Codes 16 and automated mail processing plans into the new facility required a said that DAR complete redesign of the workroom layout. Further, the because of incomplete and poor quality contract drawings, the projects structural, mechanical, and electrical costs significantly exceeded original 17 estimates. Other unanticipated costs involved dealing with a water tunnel and an abandoned freight tunnel under the site that were found after construction began. DAR also indicated that the adjacent Polk Street bridge, which was The closed by the city in 1993 because of...
