Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Aquatic Dryopoid Beetles (Coleoptera) Of the United States Thorpe and Crisp, Various parts of the legs and body, especially on the ventral side, are covered with a hydrofuge tomentum or pile which maintains a film of air when the beetle is submerged. This film, which is in contact with the air reservoir beneath the elytra, provides adequate gaseous exchange in the well-aerated lotic situations occupied by the beetles. Small bubbles of oxygen photosynthetically produced by algae and other aquatic plants provide an additional source of oxygen and can be incorporated into the plastron. Since the gaseous film is essential to these beetles, it is not difficult to understand why they cannot tolerate excessive pollution by such wetting agents as soaps and detergents.
