A kingfisher darted out of the wood, dipped her wings in the water, and flew back into the thick foliage. That was a wild little fairy, said he, whom a great giant holds prisoner in a hollow trunk. She escaped for a moment, but has flown back, because she was afraid he would seek for her. Then he saw a wild duck sitting in the most serene manner under the arched roots of an old stump, half fallen into the water, looking like a little hermit in a cave. When he approached, the duck scuffled along the water, dived down, reappeared at some distance, and swam out of sight round a bend in the river. Now he heard a chirping sound, like the cry of a bird, only sharper and quicker; and he soon saw a frolicsome squirrel skipping about from tree to tree. Oh, if I could only catch you, he said, just to peep into your bright eyes, and see your long bushy tail; and then I would let you go again. He pushed his boat to the shore, and sprang up into the tree. The squirrel went hopping from branch to branch, as if to lure him to a merry chase; but whenever Willie put out his hand, he leaped off to another bough. At last, he ran down the tree to hide himself in his hole....
