Without any suitable figures by which the absolute identity of the thing described can be determined. Recognizing this, it has been decided that all descriptions of new species shall receive proper illustration. Either by wood-cut, lithographic plates, or such other. Methods as may appear best adapted to the character of the object to be illustrated. It is confidently believed that this step will encourage investigation and careful work, and that with the large store of unexplored material. And of undescribed Species in the department of palaeontology in this immediate Vicinity, there will be no scarcity of original matter with which to Sustain the publication and justify the undertaking.
