Excerpt from Two Lectures on British Columbia Mn president - It is just eighteen months since I came a stranger amongst you, to learn and not to teach. When I look back through that short period and see how my position has changed, I may be pardoned, if I keenly feel the responsibility it entails, and deprecate, in some measure, the importance attached to my Opinions. It is true that I am no longer a stranger, that my name has become familiar to almost every household in the land, that I have been entrusted with a most important duty; but all this, I think, may be attributed as much to circumstance as to merit. I first came here for the purpose of compiling a brief history of the Colony, to be published in another form, which gave me the fullest opportunity of understanding its real condition. The favorable conclusions I drew from the evidence before me were made known to the community at a public meeting in the theatre; and thus, it was natural, on coming the second time, to complete my original business, a general desire should prevail for me to visit the upper country and judge honestly of its future, by my mining experience in California, I believe, it is admitted by all, I have discharged the onerous duties of that exploration faithfully in every respect; that I have omitted nothing, overlooked nothing, neglected nothing having a remote bearing on the future of the Colony, and I am here to night, after five months excessive labor exposure and fatigue to submit to you the final result of my investigations. I confess I have felt much anxiety about the...
