Excerpt from The Modern Psychology The Chancellor of the University, Sir John Macfarland, presiding. Mr. Chancellor, Mr. Dean, Ladies and Gentlemen - Every human being is developed from a single cell or ovum, which, after fertilisation, undergoes a long and complex series of changes, by means of which there is produced a new individual which, within the limits of ordinary variation, is like the parents that gave it birth. From the study of these Changes are derived our conceptions of the nature of sex, of heredity, of variation, of differentiation, and of many of our most important notions concerning evolution, both of the individual and of the race. Subsequent to birth a further series of changes occurs, to which the term development is applied. These changes include the processes of growth, the development of muscle, the adaptation of the brain to its intellectual functions, and many others. Any or all of these post-natal changes may not proceed to full development, in which case the child will be more or less seriously hindered from performing the normal functions of adult life. If it be the...
