Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Department of State Bulletin, Vol. 87: April-June, 1987 My own belief is that, having long since passed from the agricultural age although we still produce more than enough food to feed ourselves - we in this country have left the industrial age, and we re in a new era. No longer, if somebody asks you, What is the symbol of America s economy? - well, maybe once you would have said the blast fur nace and the assembly line. You wouldn t say that today, would you? It s different. This new information age has the potential to be our age - a period which plays to the great strengths of the West. The productivity and competitiveness of a nation will be far more dependent on how freely knowledge can be used and shared. And unlike oil or mineral wealth, knowledge is a resource that does not diminish but, rather, increases with its use. In this sort of environment, open societies such as our own will thrive; closed societies will fall behind. What is more, this lesson - that freedom...
