

Listen Up!: Memories of the Hawkcraft Admiralty, Experimental Establishment, Station Aberdour, Fife 1915-1918

By Maxwell, Diana

Aberdour Cultural Association, UK, 2014. Soft cover. Condition: New. LISTEN UP! HMS Tarlair and Memories of the Hawkcraft Admiralty Experimental Establishment Station, Aberdour, Fife, 1915-1918 DIANA MAXWELL Other than two or three shattered concrete hut bases and the crumbling ruins of an old pier, nothing now remains of HMS Tarlair, WW1 Admiralty research station, yet the work carried out here is of local and national significance. During its short period of operation, major technological advances were achieved in the battle against the German U-boat, and around 4,000 officers and men were trained here. Diana Maxwell draws together for the first time local and national records with personal recollections of the people who lived and worked around the base. It is a fascinating account that is not only the story of the development of technology, but also of the characters and personalities involved. 'a valuable addition to our knowledge about this little known, but important research station.'
