Excerpt: . . . he detained him as such, yet when he came into his presence he did him all the honour and obeisance that became a son to doe to a father. But falling into discourse with him upon the late businesse that had been betwixt them, the old man only replied: Son, fortune hath given you the victorie, and there is no place for discoursing those things with the Conqueror; and so would undertake no discourse further upon the subject. The Burgomaster upon this occasion told me what I much wondered at, that the East India Company of Holland had very little advantage by the India trade, they having not above four in the hundred, which he had reason to know, because he himselfe had a stock in it. He also told me that two or three days before the time of my discourse with him, there had been a friendship made betwixt the King of England and the Prince of Orange. On the 22 I went before four o'clock in the morning in the post waggon, which is very commodious, and having only two wheels goes with an easinesse beyond what could well be thought before tryall. In those waggons we goe to Maestricht from the Bosch in one day, which is near 70 English miles. We change horses six times by the way, which is most part heathie, but not without in some places pleasant groves of trees and corn fields; we dine at a...
