Excerpt from Papers: Before the Manchester Historic Association When first introduced it was sold for $1.25 per gallon. I remember when a boy and working in my brother s store on Elm street, of filling and trimming lamps in which was burned camphene. The lamps were rather intricate and required to be kept scrupulously clean in order to do good service. My memory may be somewhat impaired, but I have no recollection of doing anything else in that store but trim those seventeen camphene lamps. The lamps had to be trimmed every day, for it was then the custom to keep the stores open every evening in the week except Sunday. The gas pipes were first laid through Elm street in 1851. In the course of a year or two the pipes were so far extended that there was a gas light at the intersection of most of the streets in the more central part of the city. On nights when the almanac foretold the probability of there being moonlight, the street lamps were not lighted. No matter how dark and rainy the night might be the almanac s predictions were respected and the gas not lighted. On other nights they were promptly extinguished at eleven o clock. But really it made but little difference whether the street lamps were lighted or not. The light was so dim and the lamps so far apart that they seemed rather to intensify than dispel the darkness.
