Excerpt from A Memoir of Eli Bickford: A Patriot of the Revolution The vessel in which they were transported was under the command of one Captain Smallcom, one of those men of narrow and contracted souls, who are ever regarded with contempt and scorn. Mr. Bickford has often remarked of this commander, that he was a sample of the smallest com he had ever met. During the passage, Mr. Bickford was attacked with small-pox, which greatly increased his sufferings, while a plank on deck was his only pillow, added to which were the insults and severity of the officers of the vessel. On his arrival in England, he was immediately placed in close confinement, in which situation he was kept for about four years and six months.
