ACT II Scene: Davenant s country house. A room opening out on a large garden. Light summer furniture. A river is seen in the distance. The sun is shining. A month later; about two in the afternoon. When the curtain rises Davenant and Lady Thurlow are walking to and fro in the garden. Davenant carries a pruning-shears in his hand and is busy cutting roses. Lady Thurlow. My dear friend, you see my hands are full; I beg of you not to cut any more. Davenant. Just one more. He cuts another rose. Lady Thurlow. What a beautiful rose! Purple, almost black. And now I will bid you good-bye. I have already taken up more than an hour of your valuable time. I must run away. Davenant. No, no. Come in and rest for a moment. You re tired. Come and sit down...
