An earth-closet will no more work without dry earth than a water-closet will work without water; but the dryness here referred to is not absolute dryness, for the earth of the closet will always contain what moisture may be absorbed from the atmosphere. This, and even a little more than this, I have found to be not at all objectionable. What is required is, according to Professor Joy, that so much of the moisture of the fascies shall be immediately withdrawn from them that there shall be too little left to cause an offensive putrefaction. The best manner for drying the earth depends very much upon the quantity required, and the means at command. Two or three cart-loads, which will be sufficient for a years use of an ordinary family, may be taken from a ploughed field or a road-side gutter during the dry weather of summer. Dumped...
