Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Improvement Era, Vol. 17: March, 1914 Your hearing was good when you interpreted the Voice to say, stay away from Clay hill. I say so, too, for the present. Finish your work in peace and go home through Bull Valley. Fur ther than this I may only tell you to keep in strict harmony with this which you call the Intangible. With this, Fred Rojer bade his son a tender farewell, and moved quickly and quietly out of the cave. Ben started up to see which direction his father would take - in fact he started up so suddenly, that he struck his hand on a stone and awakened him self from a deep sleep. The sun was low, the clouds dark, the day as chill and gloomy as before. The hills were bare, the trees naked, and no songsters in the gulch, nor musical babble from the ice-bound spring by the bog. But Young Rojer did not see it, through gloomy eyes. He believed his dream, though he did not call it a dream when he referred to it...
