EDITOR AND PUBLISHER S NOTES Another great class graduated from Dartmouth this year, attesting the growing power and influence of this great and venerable educational institution of which the state of New Hampshire may well be proud. But it may not be amiss to suggest that while we all cherish pride in Dartmouth, which draws its patronage from all quarters of the Union and all over the world, and diffuses the influence of the Dartmouth spirit no less widely, we ought to feel that while the state is generous to Dartmouth it should at least be just to its own special institution at Durham, upon which it must naturally depend for the higher education of the sons and daughters of its common people to whom we must mainly look for the material, intellectual and moral progress of the state in the years to come. The fact that more New Hampshire farms for summer homes have been sold to outsiders during the past year, than in any former year, may be cause for congratulation in one sense; but it would be far greater cause to know that more sons of New Hampshire farmers, broadly educated, had located on as many old homesteads in the state, ready and determined to take up the work of development along the lines of improved agriculture and...
