Leonaur Ltd, 2011. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . The Red Battle Flyer by Manfred Freiherr von Richthofen An Aviator s Field Book by Oswald Boelcke Two German Aces of the Great War There can be little doubt that the most iconic fighter pilot of the First World War on the Western Front was the aristocratic German ace of aces, Baron Manfred von Richthofen. Known universally, due to his particularly conspicuous bright-red coloured Fokker Albatros triplane, as the Red Baron, he and the equally gaudy aircraft of his comrades of the Flying Circus were no mere publicity stunt as their counterparts among the French and British squadrons who opposed them could attest, often to their fatal cost. In fact, Richthofen s personal kill record was 80-more than any pilot in the conflict. Just twenty six years old when he was eventually killed in 1918, he might justifiably be described as the most famous fighter pilot of all time. Fortunately for posterity, Richthofen found the time to write a book of his experiences, the well regarded The Red Battle Flyer. It will be a familiar text to many of those interested in the Great War in the air. It is accompanied in this special Leonaur edition by the account of another incredibly significant German fighter pilot of the period, Oswald Boelcke. Boelcke was nothing less than the Red Baron s mentor and Richthofen s admiration for him was significant. Certainly, Boelcke was responsible for defining the craft of aerial combat and his leadership and tactical skills are regarded as original and highly influential. He was particularly concerned with the benefits and capabilities of formation fighting. An ace in his own right, he had 40 victories to his credit before he too was killed...
