New Series, July October, 1871 Some eleven years ago, when the famous Origin of Species came before the world, a hint was given that more important researches were awaiting the naturalist in the distant future. Psychology will be based upon a new foundation - that of the necessary acquirement of each mental power and capacity by gradation. Light also will be thrown on the origin of man and his history. (P. 577, fifth edition.) The new work purports to supply this light, and to establish this foundation. The conclusions at which the author arrives are somewhat as follows. From the similarity of man to the lower animals in many points of structure and constitution, and especially in embryonic development, and also from the rudiments of parts and organs which he retains, and the reversions to which he is liable, Mr. Darwin has no doubt that man is descended from some less highly organized form. He even attempts a history of his evolution and a sketch of some of..
