Excerpt from A Discussion of Telephone Competition Mr. Ainsworth s letter is largely a recital of telephone history, as relates to the inadequacy and imperfect service before competition, the springing up of competition in response to the public demands, the results thereof in improvement of service, lowering of rates, extension of exchange lines, extensions to rural districts, extension of toll lines, establishment of ex changes in small towns, the improvements in equipment, etc. Some of these items are illustrated by reference to the Columbus plant. The illustrations could be readily multiplied by any one who has observed telephone conditions in Ohio and other states. After all, this tremendous spontaneous growth is its own justification.
