You sometimes see me prescribe alkalies, and at other times acids, to relieve the symptoms from which these persons are suffering. There are also cases in which I order preparations of cinchona, quassia, or strychnine; and there are others, in which I order opium, belladonna, and antispasmodics. In fact, I vary my treatment in an infinity of ways. The reason of my thus acting as if I had no fixed rules to guide me, really arises from there being nothing determinate in dyspepsia itself. In it, more than in any other morbid condition, the physician, free to act on the suggestions of the moment as they arise, is forced to feel his way as he proceeds, inquiring into the indications, which vary with the case, with the person, and which may also differ in the same person at different times.
