Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Commerce Property in Naval Warfare: A Letter of the Lord Chancellor To reform the international laws and customs of warfare at sea is the ambition of all far-sighted men who have at heart the commercial and maritime interests of the world. The volume and complexity of trade have grown so enormously even during the brief period of 50 years that has elapsed since neutrals by the Declaration of Paris gained their Magna Charta; the balance of juristic and commercial opinion has been so greatly altered since the Abbe de Mably, Franklin, Galiani, and Brougham preached to unenlightened governments; finally, the approach of the second Hague Conference, when this question must come up, is so near that a brief statement of the case as it now stands seems to be required. Accordingly, I have ventured to ask the present Lord Chancellor for his permission to republish a letter addressed to the Times by Sir Robert Reid last autumn. No modern writer has shown so clearly, so broadly, and so concisely, the overwhelming strength of the arguments which should make our own country the protagonist in the movement.
