George Canning: On the Late Election for Liverpool, as Far as They Relate to the Questions of Peace and of Reform It would however have been well if Mr. Canning had confined himself to assertion, and left his hearers in that happy state of confidence which his assurances had inspired; but, unfortunately, he has undertaken to produce proof of facts in themselves: so evident and by a proceeding too common with distinguished orators, has thereby thrown doubts and distrust upon that which must otherwise have been explicitly admitted. I suppose, says Mr. Canning, any man will allow that the present year is a year [as] extended war as ever Europe witnesses We have seen in the southern part of Europe the city of Madrid entered by the victorious troops of Great Britain, and we have heard with horror how the imperial city [of] the north has escaped from the ravages of the conqueror, only by being consumed in flames of her own kindling - but, O gentlemen, the same sun which gilded the triumphal entry of Lord Wellington into Madrid, and turned pale at the degradation of Moscow, has ripened during the present year, both in the north and in the south, the most luxuriant harvest that ever blessed mankind. Before the war loaf is paraded again, let the philosophers who support my antagonist, bring me the solution of this phenomenon.
