FREE ASSOCIATION OF GERMAN TRADE UNIONS

Alphascript Publishing. Taschenbuch. Condition: Neu. Neuware - The Free Association of German Trade Unions was a trade union federation in Imperial and early Weimar Germany. It was founded in 1897 in Halle under the name Representatives' Centralization of Germany as the national umbrella organization of the localist current of the German labor movement. The localists rejected the centralization in the labor movement following the sunset of the Anti-Socialist Laws in 1890 and preferred grassroots democratic structures. The lack of a strike code soon led to conflict within the organization. Various ways of providing financial support for strikes were tested before a system of voluntary solidarity was agreed upon in 1903, the same year the name Free Association of German Trade Unions was adopted. During the years following its formation, the FvDG began to adopt increasingly radical positions. During the German socialist movement's debate over the use of mass strikes, the FvDG advanced the view that the general strike must be a weapon in the hands of the working class. 120 pp. Englisch.
