D. in economics from the University of Rochester. Jean majored in mathematic economics under the late Professor Lionel McKenzie, who is referred to as the father of the mathematic economist and often mentioned side by side with Arrow and Debreu, who jointly won the Nobel Prize in 1983. While achieving her Ph. D. , she also majored in macroeconomics, which was at its frontier at the time, known as the Real Business Cycle (RBC) Theory. During the 1990s, Jean lectured at various universities in both the United Kingdom and the United States. In 1994, Jean was awarded the Schumpeter Prize in Germany for her scholarly contribution in macroeconomics and economic growth. Her name is included in the 14th Edition of Marquis WHOS WHO IN THE WORLD for noteworthy achievements of lasting value to humankind. In the last sixteen years, since 911 of 2001, Jean has written two books, a long and a short version of a groundbreaking and rigorous research in her new macroeconomics. The current book is the short version. It is about how to make America great again towards the sustainable prosperity by a powerful quantitative analysis as a blueprint designed to empower Americans, as opposed to the current mainstream economics -Keynesian economics that came out eighty one years ago! Over the years, this old economics has failed miserably, yet, it had become a convenient tool for a liberal White House to accomplish its leftist agenda-using deficit spending to save an economy already in deep...
