A Holiday we now had to Slough, and little Charlotte's delight was unbounded. Could we have remained there for a few days what a mutual comfort it would have been! but servants then, as now, would not assist beyond their engagements. Our house in town had been let this last quarter, so that, at last, was off our hands, and George Papendiek became our inmate again at Windsor. Then I had a surprise--an unpleasant one, I must admit, as I did not feel equal to it--by a visit from Mr. Papendiek's father, who came over with the quarterly messenger from Hanover. He was very jaded...
