Excerpt: . . . who, superior to general prejudice, was willing to seek for information through a medium by which few other nations of the East will condescend to accept of knowledge, however beneficial the attainment might prove to themselves. Whatever might have been their separate sentiments, the ultimate decision was temperate and wise. I was apprised, late on the evening of the 28th, by a verbal communication from the Maywoon of Pegue, that on the day appointed for the delivery of the reply to the Governor-generals letter, I should be formally received at the palace of the king, who would grant me a personal audience in the character to which I laid claim, and that the propositions which I had suggested, for the regulation and encouragement of commerce, had for the most part received his majestys approbation. I expressed, in answer, the satisfaction I felt from hearing a resolution so creditable to themselves; but added, that as the letter I had written was a public and solemn declaration, I should require more than a verbal assurance, before I could consistently subject myself to a repetition of former disappointments, and requested that he would take the trouble to reduce his obliging message to writing. With this he readily complied by a short note written in the Binnan language. The form of receiving the presents, which were brought to me as a return for those that had been given, occupied a considerable portion of the last days. One...
