Thomas Rizzo, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Maintaining law and order in the Old West stood as a major challenge to those who chose to wear a badge. The hours were long. The expanse of the areas under a lawman's jurisdiction was huge. Although the responsibilities fell to the most qualified, no formal guidelines or standards were in place. In Tall Tales from the High Plains Beyond, Book Two: The Law Keepers, novelist Tom Rizzo introduces you to a courageous, sometimes innovative, and mostly persistent cross section of those who figured out the best way to do the job on their terms. A few others walked both sides of the law. - One of the Dalton brothers who didn't break the law. He chose to enforce it. - Jack Slade who lay in the dirt bleeding from six bullet wounds and two shotgun blasts, but lives to reap revenge. - A rare town square showdown between Wild Bill Hickok and gambler Davis Tutt to settle a poker game argument. - Tom Bear River Smith, the town marshal who wore no gun while patrolling the streets of Abilene, Kansas, dubbed, the Wickedest Wildest Town in the West. - Sheriff Harry Morse and his courageous one-man showdown with a feared killer and his gang. Texas Ranger Jim Gillett who risked everything by riding into a Mexican village to capture the man who killed his friend. - George Maledon, a small quiet man with dark eyes, known as the Prince of Hangmen.
