Improvement is almost sure to result from self-judgment of the merit of her own work by the teacher. 12. Progress in ability from grade to grade is shown, and places where greater stress needs to be put upon any subject are revealed. 13. Places in the system where certain subjects are under-stressed and others are correspondingly over-stressed are plainly set forth by test results. 14. Justification in results for praise or condemnation of any certain method that has been extensively used by any teacher is found when results of tests are tabulated and compared. 15. Standard tests throw light on the scientific phases of teaching and enable the supervisor to form more accurate...
