Household Fertility Behaviour and Children's Schooling Amongst Tribals

By Sumanash Dutta

Mittal Publications, New Delhi, 2008. N.A. Book Condition: New. 23 cms. xiv, 146 p. : maps , The dominant fertility research agenda stresses the socio-economic perspective of the effects of socio-economic structural factors on fertility decline. A large number of studies based upon correlation and regression analyses on fertility and on children's educational attainments have been carried out, on a wide variety of the cross-sectional data, from both economic and sociological points of view. An important implication of these theories is the emergence of a hypothesised negative quantity-quality trade-off-which maintains that quantity and quality of children would interact because parents desire approximately equal level of quality for each of their children. However, despite a variety of theoretical and empirical formulations on the subject, household fertility and children's schooling remain perplexing issues. It is , therefore, imperative that micro-demographic studies on the diverse socio-economic cultural groups are undertaken in order to further enrich knowledge in this area. It is with this view that efforts are made in this study to identify the socio-economic factors which influence the household fertility behaviour and household demand for children's education. Attempts have also been made to find out interrelationship, if any, between fertility and children's education...
