Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from A New World of Beauty: A Description of Rocky Mountain Evergreens; Trees of Marvelous Tints Ages ago rock from the western mountains were carried eastward in the great ice ships, and enough to build a city has been landed on the prairie a few miles from where I write. There is another eastward movement now from the Rockies, which is bearing the hardiest and most beautiful conifers on earth and distributing them over the plains and scattering them over the land to the Atlantic. Nowhere in the world, do you find trees of such marvelous beauty as in the Rockies. They are not trees to be petted. They are children of the storms, very hardy and adapted to a wide range of soil and climate. What is the cause of that exquisite sheen which gives them such attractiveness? Probably the high altitude, and the shelter of the deep gorges. A tree standing out in the full sunlight, and in the full sweep of the winds. Seldom has these silver robes. You find the richest colors in the best sheltered places, where the evolution of beauty has been going on for ages. And those garments of more than courtly splendor have descended from parent to child. Merit is sure to win. The horticulturist now searches the high elevations and dark canyons, not for silver mines, but for the silver which mingles with the green in such harmonious blending. Trees are influenced by their environment. The red cedar of the Platte river. And the silver cedar of the Rockies, are first cousins. One has been buffeted by the storms and burned by the droughts; the other...
