Excerpt from In Memoriam, Jane Chisholm, Ob. 30th Sept., 1865, Aet. 19: Sermon, Preached at West Branch East River, Pictou, on the 1st Day of October, 1865 And HE said unto them, give place; for T1111 Minx) Is now dead, but sleepeth. - Matt. ix. 24. IT seems easy to comprehend this death-scene in the house of fairus. In so far, at least, as some of the circumstances attending it are concerned, the event might have been one of yesterday, and the dead one of our acquaintances and friends. We can, in thought, easily cross that threshold darkened by the shadow of affliction, mingle with those mourners that have, long ages ago, slept in their turn the sleep of death, understand their sorrows, and comprehend their joys. Standing by the side of the couch where lies the lifeless maiden, we can gaze upon that brow ennobled by death calm and motionless as the chiseled marble, and more dignified and august, by far, than that of any living queen. And, as we stand by that couch and gaze upon that upturned, motionless face,...
