O rare, Madam! your Ladyships a great headpiece; but now, dear Madam, is the hard task, if I may take the liberty to fay it--to enjoy all freedoms, and seem to abstain, to manage the number of pretenders, and keep the disobliged from parting Wid. Never fear, Tattleaid; while you have riches, if you affront one to abuse, you can give hopes to another to defend you: these maxims I have been laying up all my husbands life time, for we must provide against calamities--fat. But now, Madam, a sine young gentleman with a red coat, that dances Wid. You may be sore the happy man (if it be in fate, that there is a happy man, to make me an unhappy py woman, ) shall not be an old one again: age and youth married, is the cruelty in Drjdens Virgil, where Mezentius ties the dead and living together; Im sure I was tyd to a dead man many a long day before I durst bury him--but the day is now my own--yet now I think ont, Tattleaid, be sure to keep an obstinate shyness to all our old acquaintance: let em talk of favours...
