Forgotten Books, 2018. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Frances and the Irrepressibles at Buena Vista Farm These children enjoyed far better going to this farm than to the seashore, moun tains, or any fashionable resort. It was one of the most attractive places one could imagine for, healthy, romping, growing children to pass a summer in, as there was everything for them to have fun with from fishing and sailing on the lake to riding on loads of hay and building log cabins in the woods. These were some of the pas times the older children enjoyed while the younger ones were happy playing round the house. There always were new little kittens and puppies to be inspected each year and divided among the youngsters after much arguing and disputing as to which was the prettiest, and as to who was entitled to first choice. Then there were the little, ?uffy, yellow chickens just out of their shells, and last but not least, there was the swing; yes, the swing, and such a glorious one you never saw in all your life, so I am going to describe it to you minutely. In the first place it was hung from a high curved limb of a tall elm tree, so high that no ladder on the farm could reach it, so they had to wait until the men came along to mend the telegraph wires, when, having boots with long nails in them to help them climb the poles, Miss Amelia would ask them to put up the rope for the swing. The advantage of having such a long rope was that the swing went so high that the earth seemed dropping away and one could see across the lake...
