Excerpt: . . . the discovery of two points--first, the situation of the Temple, and secondly, of the Tombs of the Kings of Judea and the Sepulchre of Him who was called the King of the Jews. It was quite impossible to point out with mathematical precision any of these points, but he had found sufficient to confirm the Bible, the Talmud, and Josephus. The new Pacha was fairly inclined towards the exploration, and probably would give it every help, provided he was kept fully acquainted with what was going on: while the Jews had manifested great interest in the work, being always anxious to know whether water had been struck, as they believed in the advent of their Messiah when a third spring should be discovered in the city, two having already been found. Sir Henry Rawlinson moved the adoption of the report and a vote of thanks to Captain Warren, commenting upon the Moabite stone, which he thought would be the precursor of many similar discoveries; but the inscriptions would always, he predicted, be in the Phoenician language, as the Hebrews must have looked upon such trophies as idolatrous. Mr. S. Morley, M. P. , seconded the resolution, intimating his intention to continue his liberal subscriptions to the Fund. The resolution, after being supported by Professor Donaldson, was carried unanimously, as was also a second, proposed by the Dean of Westminster and seconded by Mr. Grove, declaring it to be desirable that special efforts should be...
