No, Uncle John, answered one of the figures, a dark and strikingly handsome young man of some twenty-six summers, and a noble brow. No, Uncle John; the fact is, I have asked Mabel to be my wife, and she has consented. Yes, dear Uncle John! exclaimed the fair--no, dark, young girl in amber, which suited her figure and style of beauty so well that she always wore it when she wanted to look particularly killing. Yes, Uncle John, please, I've promised to marry Gerald. And she kissed her uncle on both cheeks. The gentleman thus saluted rose from his chair, ejaculated-- Bless my soul! and then, taking the young man's hand, said, -- Gerald, my lad, you have won a treasure. He then left them alone, whereupon they kissed each...
