The city was practically a collection of isolated villages widely separated and at certain seasons almost inaccessible. In the vicinity of the Navy Yard, the Arsenal, the Capitol and the President s House, as many communities had sprung into existence through the necessities of public business. Under such circumstances social entertainments were of rare occurrence and imposed upon the participants no small degree of inconvenience. This condition of things is now changed. The Capital, within a few days ride of the remotest sections of the country, with its beautiful parks, broad avenues and magnificent public edifices, its Chief Magistrate, its Congress, its Supreme Judiciary, its attractions of art, its libraries, museums, institutions of science and learning, its churches and asylums, and its places of amusement, has become a resort for citizens of culture, means and leisure from all parts of the country, and a centre of attraction to foreigners from all parts of the globe visiting the United States. Official and social intercourse at the Capital is governed by rules and usages, some of which, in their origin, are contemporaneous with the foundation of the Government, while others have been evolved out of...
