Excerpt from Cumorah s Southern Cross, Vol. 5: May, 1931 That is the way it is with most things. Of life. We enjoy them not because we understand them, nor because they al ways seem reasonable to us, but because we have learned to follow the instruo tions of them, who do understand. To take another example, how many people who drive automobiles can explain their mechanics? Perhaps half the drivers cannot. They have merely learned that by turnmg a switch and pressing a star ter, the motor will beg in running. Then if the clutch is pushed in, and the gears. Properly meshed, and the clutch let out again, the machine will move forward. Thus most of us drive automobiles many of us in complete ignorance of their mechanics. Merely because we have learned that by doing precisely as the makers instructed, we are transported in comfort. It makes no difference what. We think of the instructions, we fail if we do not comply with them. To turn. On the switch before pushing the starter, may seem silly to us. We may reason...
