Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Popular Government, Vol. 49: Summer 1983 I suggest that North Carolina establish a system of approximately ten regional training centers strategically located at selected community colleges (and possibly at large municipal police academies). These centers would be the sole providers of certified basic and in-ser vice training. Each regional center would have a core teaching staff of from three to ten full-time professional instructors who had themselves received Specialized training at the state training center. Much of the writ ten -material they would use would be developed by the central staff. Thus the instructional personnel of these regional training centers would receive consist ently accurate, up-to-date information. Each regional training center could be coordinated and directed by a local advisory board, with oversight by the Department of Community Colleges and the state level Criminal Justice Education and Training Stan dards Commission. That Commission could adopt standards and regulations for the Standards Division of the Department of Justice to use in certifying regional training programs and instructors. High minimum stan dards of program quality could thus be established and maintained. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
