If the gonococcus is absent in the adult form, the disease must be due to other pusproducing germs. It will sometimes follow mechanical and chemical accidents or badly treated catarrhal conjunctivitis. Treatment.--In the stage of infiltration cold applications must be kept on the eye continuously. This may be done by keeping a number of small squares of muslin on a block of ice, and transferring one to the eye every minute. The secretion should be washed away with a warm boric acid solution (3 per cent), or some other mild antiseptic, about once every hour. The bowels should be well purged with salines and the patient kept as quiet as possible. If pain is very severe an adult may be...
