The general report of this survey, prepared by Dr. F. B. Sumner, Dr. Leon J. Cole, and the present writer, in zoology, and by Dr. Bradley M. Davis, in botany, has been completed and is in course of publication by the Bureau of Fisheries. 205 85079--Bull. 30--12 14 Biology at the Tortugas, Fla. , by the present writer (1908), only a few scattering species have received mention, and that incidental. The species of the West Indies have been entirely neglected, but Verrill has recorded a few from the Bermudas. While the Canadian Bryozoa have been fairly well studied through the efforts of Stimpson, Dawson, Packard, Hincks, Whiteaves, and others, and Smitts monograph deals with the species of the deeper waters of the Floridan region, the extensive tract from New England to Florida has remained entirely untouched, and the New England region has been treated very inadequately. A number of short papers and references to New England Bryozoa are found in the literature of the subject, but in nearly all cases these are buried in reports dealing with other groups, and hence are not readily accessible and are easily overlooked. The first of these to appear, and the first to be published in America as well, was a short list by Desor (1848) of species observed by him in the region of Nantucket. This paper is chiefly interesting because it contains the original descriptions of two of our most characteristic species, Bugula turrita and Membranipora tenuis. In...
