Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . At a young age, Drew lost his mother to breast cancer. She was his whole world. Too afraid to show his emotions, he held everything inside. The tragedy alone was unbearable, but to make matters worse, he and his older brother, Christopher, now had to move in with their angry, hurt, and confused Vietnam Vet Father. Not knowing where to turn, Andrew felt completely lost. Normally, he'd confide in his brother, but knowing he was equally hurt, he turned to writing, instead. The problem with writing, he felt, is it wasn't tough or cool, and living in a household where no one showed their emotions, excelling in sports seemed to be the answer. So, he followed in his brother's footsteps, losing himself in sports. You can only hide behind trophies and medals for so long though. Sports eventually lost their flare, and reality started sinking in. Although, now a man, the lost, hurt, and confused, seven-year-old boy was still inside, searching for answers. The writing, also, only helped so much in expressing who he was. Ultimately, he needed to confront the root of the issue; at the moment, he wasn't ready to. To numb and dumb himself from the pain, Drew turned to sex, drugs, and rock-n-roll. Even these expensive cheap thrills could only mask the pain temporarily. Andrew's life began spiraling out of control, sinking deeper and deeper from the truth, into a dark, alienated place of depression. Even in the midst of his crazy life, a light always seemed to shine among him. The moment he began to question who he was, strange things started happening to him, good and bad. Is...
