We must take care that this power, which was created for our defence, was not used in any way to interfere with the affairs of other nations. (cheers.) The people of England had been taxed with the object of defending themselves. Finding they were surrounded by great military and naval powers, they had thought it necessary to bear all this taxation on purpose to make and feel themselves secure. Let us, then, look with extreme jealousy lest this power should be used in the quarrels on the continent. In looking over the events of history, it would be seen that, during the last 180 years, we had entered into no less than ten great wars - all for obtaining the balance of power. (laughter and cheers.) We commenced in the reign of William III. By fighting the Bourbon Louis XIV., and we finished in 1815 by fighting for the Bourbon to restore him to the throne of France. We fought against the...
