

It-Architecture as Enabler of Business Processes

By Florian Kurtz

GRIN Verlag. Paperback. Condition: New. 28 pages. Dimensions: 8.5in. x 5.5in. x 0.1in. Scholarly Research Paper from the year 2011 in the subject Computer Science - Applied, grade: 2, 3, AKAD University of Applied Sciences Stuttgart, course: IMG03, language: English, abstract: For many companies the incorporating of their business processes into the existing IT-Landscape becomes a great challenge. In the majority of cases the existing models for business processes were developed by non-technical business analysts, who do not usually consider the limitations, concurrency, granularity or interaction models of the existing IT-Landscape. In times of dynamically changing markets and the progressive motion towards globalization in companies, it is increasingly important for companies to adapt their IT-Landscape and business processes to changing conditions. For this reason, this assignment will provide an overview of the importance the IT-Architecture, which enables and supports business processes. In addition it will give an insight to the service oriented architecture and its meaning in this context. The main target of this assignment is to explain which technologies are available to adapt the IT-Landscape to dynamically changing requirements in companies and how IT-Architecture This item ships from multiple locations.
