In todays world it is nearly impossible to work ones way through college. In fact, work and savings often reduce the amounts of financial aid. College in Three Years shows how one can use organizational skills and a students brainpower to save money and time. Students may take Advanced Placement, College-Level Exams, and other tests to earn credits without taking college courses. One can use the Internet, correspondence courses, and community college courses to acquire credits even before one begins ones freshman year in college. Instead of part-time employment that reduces financial aid, the book recommends taking extra courses and summer school to accelerate the process of education. With the costs of many colleges being 25, 000 a year and more, and the opportunity costs of going to school rather than being employed amount to about the same sum, it is easy to calculate the potential savings that will result by following the recommendations of this work.
