Popular Press 3. Paperback. Condition: New. 180 pages. Dimensions: 8.8in. x 5.9in. x 0.6in. This is the first study of Hollywood by an anthropologist. Jorja Prover examines how different groups of individuals, separated from one another superficially by ethnicity, race, and sex, function as writers in Hollywood. She describes the white majority Hollywood writers and explores their concerns and creative processes, and then discusses other writers who, until recently, have been virtually invisible in the entertainment industry: women, the physically challenged, gays, African Americans, Latinos, and Asians. In detailing their efforts at gaining professional acceptance, these writers introduce new, previously unmentioned issues involving access, advancement, talent, sexual harassment, and discrimination. This item ships from multiple locations. Your book may arrive from Roseburg, OR, La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
