Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from History of the 118th Infantry: American Expeditionary Force, France About the middle of July the Regiment was assembled at Camp Sevier, near Greenville, S. C., as the pioneer regiment of the 30th Division. The camp at that time consisted mostly of woods, cultivated fields and mud. By the first of November great improvements had been made in the camp, this Regiment having contributed more than its share of work in the cleaning up process. Infantry might have been the official designation of the Regiment, but the men insisted that it should be called the South Carolina Land Development Company, so expert had they become with the use of the pick and shovel. Under the new plan of organization, the personnel of an infantry regiment had been greatly increased, the new plan calling for a war strength of more than men and officers. As this Regiment had a strength of about when it reached Camp Sevier, it was necessary to add twice its strength to fill it up to the required standard. The dissolution of the 55th Depot Brigade in October added several hundred men who had belonged to National Guard units from South Carolina, North Carolina and Tennessee. A draft of men from Camp Jackson, S. c., during the same month, brought the strength to around two hundred men per company but even this was not enough, so during the winter another contingent from Camp Dodge, Iowa, was added, bringing the Regiment to full war strength. The Camp Dodge men were mostly from Iowa, Blinnesota and the Dakotas, but soon had warmed themselves into the hearts of the Southerners, establishing a friendship between the different sections of the...
