Birdlife International, United Kingdom, 2004. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 240 x 170 mm. Language: N/A. Brand New Book. Given the fundamental importance of biodiversity, we know surprisingly little about it. We are sure that it is disappearing fast, yet at present we cannot even measure progress (or otherwise) towards the 2010 target set by world leaders for slowing this loss. This BirdLife assessment examines what the best known group of living things, birds, can tell us about the state of biodiversity, the pressures upon it and the solutions that are being, or should be, put in place. It is a synthesis of current knowledge and provides a benchmark against which we can assess our efforts to conserve biodiversity in the future. An exciting testimony to BirdLife s Intent and capacity to influence policy at the highest levels.gives a clear overview of how individual observations contribute to the bigger picture.a useful digest of contemporary conservation science presented in a less technical way. - Paul Jepson, Birding Asia . The material is presented in such a clear, compact and exciting way that everyone who turns the pages will have their mind focused on the problems raised.should be in every school, academic and local library. - Biological Conservation . A Red Book for the state of the planet, using the best known group of animals, birds, as examples to show what has happened, what is still happening, and what we are starting to do about it. - Bull ABC . A most useful document for all involved in conservation and conservation education. - Ibis . Full of interesting stories.illustrates that BirdLife is not narrowly concerned with saving birds from people, but tries to use the joy and appeal of birdwatching as a vehicle for better management of this world, so that birds as...
